

From: Dean Pulsifer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/6/01 9:58pm
Subject: Anti-trust settlement

I think that what ever is being set as a punishment needs to actually be a punishment and not an easy way for Microsoft to enter a market it is still trying to gain market share in. The punishment of providing free software for schools is really a punishment for Apple and Linux vendors, not for Microsoft.

Microsoft has driven a lot of useful improvements in software development, but they have done so at the expense of a lot of other companies.

Dean Pulsifer (pulsifer@bigfoot.com)